Answer:

When I was at the prison hospital I met women wearing orange wrist bands waiting their turn to put to sleep.

People who were sentenced to death wear orange wrist band, and they wait for their turns to put to sleep (Lethal death) at the prison hospital.

How many women did you see who had orange wrist bands?

Answer - 2

Young Uyghur ladies. One of them told me that she has been given death sentence and waiting for her turn to be put to sleep.

Had the ones with the wristbands been through a court process of any kind? What was their 'crime'?

I don't know because we were not allowed to speak to one another, but I suspected that they must have been accused of involving in terrorist activities which is a common accusation without any proper legal procedures.

- The officials made a mistake on the second document regarding my age.

- Although the release papers says released on Jan 14, 2005, I was actually released 6 days early on Jan 8th, 2005. Is this the date inaccuracy? (Logistics note: she wasn't sure if this was what you were asking about)

QUESTION AND RESPONSES

Q: Please tell us about the date at the bottom of the footage? When were the videos filmed, and by who?

Videos: Some videos are not taken by me. It was filmed in February and March of this year. However, the photographer forgot to adjust the time at that time, sometimes shooting the day directly. Then Beijing's monitoring equipment will grab them according to the video time. So I asked the later editors to help adjust and cover up. The blue background behind the subtitles is actually the actual shooting time. Some videos are adjusted by the photographer to the future during photography. It may not be important for later editing, so it will not be overwritten with blue subtitles. List is below of the videos and dates of filming.

Robertson and Hinde

Q: “On page 66 of your report you make reference to no existing Red Cross programme in Tibet. Does this mean that Tibetans are not a source of organ donations and/or that the CCP keeps different numbers on that?”

RESPONSE FROM MATTHEW ROBERTSON

The regional (i.e. Tibet) Red Cross did not publish any data at the time we collected data for the report. So we have no information about Red Cross claims of deceased voluntary organ transplants during the period of our study. This is a separate matter to whether there are transplants taking place in Tibet (whether from voluntary or nonvoluntary donors). In particular, the thrust of our study is to show that the voluntary deceased donor numbers overall - including those provided by Red Cross - bear no discernible relation to actual donation activity anyway. Actual transplant activity in Tibet would have to be investigated separately.

If the tribunal wants to investigate officially, it should prepare some steps due to required their high security to access.

Q clarified. Regarding: 'it should prepare some steps due to required their high security to access'

What do you mean to prepare some steps etc?

To be clear, the statement means that the online group assesses your background and who recommended you to their group if you try to log in the website.

Then, they allow you to see their contents by your trust level. If you gain the trust they will give you and access right to the online forum and move you up to levels in the forum.

It takes one or two weeks to get to the lowest trust level. If the web manager does not suspect you, they will level you up for you within several weeks.

The procedure will continue until you can end up achieving the safest level where you have access to the most information.

(from translator) Mr. Kim got the information on the website through another person who already passed several levels of the steps of the website's safety rules.

He will contact the person and ask him to take some screenshots of particular parts of the site that shows more evidence of what he was talking about. This information will be forwarded to the Tribunal as soon as possible.
